

Editorial

It is our great satisfaction to present the 12th number of the Jahr – European Journal of Bioethics, which is indexed in ERIH PLUS since November 2015. This issue is divided into several sections, and it brings 25 different contributions: four original research articles, one short communication, three review articles, one professional article, seven essays, one reprinted article, four personal dedications to Hans-Martin Sass, one student paper, and two book reviews.

The first section is dedicated to The „European Bioethics in Action (EuroBioAct)” project, whose primary aims are to complete theoretical basis of the „new European bioethics” and to apply that theoretical basis to practice. In this section you can read about translating Asian bioethics into developing global bio cultures, hunting as a bioethical issue, early Greek perspective of „upward levelling“ of plants, application potential of Fritz Jahr’s European concept of bioethics, some European and American views on practical aspects of bioethics, and organic architecture and bioethics.

The second section is completely dedicated to Hans-Martin Sass as a way of honouring him for his 80th birthday. We are grateful to all the authors who contributed to this initiative. In this section you will find reviewed articles about Fritz Jahr’s bioethics and the stem cell research, and differential ethics in global mental health, one reprinted article about personalised medicine, essays about organ donation, bioethics and the arts, moral decay in holy matrimony, and very personal dedications written in Hans-Martin Sass’ honour by the authors who have found inspiration for their work in his bioethical legacy.

The third section consists of usual contributions to our Journal. It brings three review articles about crystallisation of the concept of the medical secret in 19th century France, athlete’s body in the past and today, political and economic environments as criminogenic potential for expansion of organised crime, as well as two essays. The first essay is about deontology and its role in medical practice in Albania, and the second is about plagiarism in politics, science and sport. Additionally, you can find a student paper about Halliwick concept in children with cerebral palsy and autism, and two book reviews.

Sincerely Yours,

Stjepka Popović
